

"Rejecting the sin of racism..."

GCORR was created to hold The United Methodist Church accountable in its commitment to reject the sin of racism in every aspect of church life. For decades, GCORR has supported this work with clergy, laity, and congregations through education and consultation, and by responding to calls for help from across the denomination. In solidarity with global movements for liberation and justice, we seek to make our tools and resources available as broadly as possible.

Featured Resources

In the “What Is?” series, GCORR offers a compilation of concise definitions, examples, and Biblical/theological foundations to create common vocabulary for Christians as we engage in anti-racism work. Entries include: gaslighting, ethnicity, internalized oppression, ableism, beloved community, BIPOC, and accent bias. Learn more at r2hub.org/what-is-series.

This year, we are launching a series of book study guides that correspond with books based on themes ranging from equity and ministry sustainability to how to fight racism. Our hope is that these study guide resources will help you on your anti-racism journey, deepen your faith, and strengthen your mind and spirit to continuing working for a more just and equitable world.
